Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) are passively managed investment funds that track the performance of an underlying index. Almost anything you can do with a single share or stock you can do with an ETF unit. Traditional funds (funds with units not listed on an exchange), typically only offer the opportunity to subscribe or redeem units at the Net Asset Value (NAV) on each day. The Deutsche Bank sponsored ETFs offer the same trading opportunities as single stocks on the JSE Limited and are quoted continuously during exchange trading hours. ETFs can be bought or sold via any stockbroker, financial advisor or direct from db x-trackers.

S&P500® Index

The S&P 500 is a free-float capitalization-weighted index published since 1957 of the prices of 500 large-cap common stocks actively traded in the United States. The stocks included in the S&P® 500 are those of large publicly held companies that trade on either of the two largest American stock market companies; the NYSE Euronext and the NASDAQ OMX.

After the Dow Jones Industrial Average, the S&P 500 is the most widely followed index of large-cap American stocks. It is considered a bellwether for the American economy, and is included in the Index of Leading Indicators. Some mutual funds, exchange-traded funds, and other funds such as pension funds, are designed to track the performance of the S&P 500 index.

The index has traditionally been market-value weighted; that is, movements in the prices of stocks with higher market capitalizations have a greater effect on the index than companies with smaller market caps. The index is now float weighted. That is, Standard & Poor's now calculates the market caps relevant to the index using only the number of shares available for public trading.
