FAQs

Does the Fund hold structured products?

As a structured products fund, the Fund can hold structured products; i.e. the equity-linked securities that are popular with many investors. However, holding structured products in an open ended fund isn't always cost effective or flexible. Instead, the Investment Manager primarily allocates the Fund's holdings to the individual building blocks of structured products (equity derivatives and debt securities). This achieves the same result as holding structured products, whilst giving the Investment Manager more flexibility to manage the Fund's risk and minimise the Fund's transaction costs, which improves the performance of the Fund.

Does the Fund limit exposure to a particular region or sector?

No. The Investment Manager's principal focus is to manage the Fund's risk and generate a stable and consistent return. The Investment Manager allocates fund holdings to those investments with the regional or sectoral exposure that it deems will achieve the Fund's objective most effectively.

Is the Fund actively managed?

The Fund is actively managed. The Investment Manager uses its expertise to determine which investments will best achieve the Fund's objective. The Fund's holdings themselves (structured products and the building blocks of structured products) are passive in nature; they pay a defined return in defined scenarios. It is this combination of passive investments with the active selection expertise of the Investment Manager that aims to achieve a stable, consistent return in a broad range of market conditions.

What is Investec's role in the Fund?

Investec is the distributor of the Fund. Investec does not manage or administer the Fund.
